FLOWER FESTIVAL.

ve Thousand Visitors—Eagle Corps Evening—A Prospect That the Pestival May Continue Through

BRILLIANT SUCCE

EIGHTH DAY OF A MOST

The eighth day of the Flower Festival shows that the public interest in the marvelous display continues keen. The jam was not so enormous as on the preceding evening, but was pienty large for comfort, a close estimate setting the attendance at something over 5000. It was a good-natured and appreciative crowd, as it has been right along, and there were hundreds of new faces present, as well as thousands which have been seen there pretty regularly since the opening. Several changes were noticeable in the Pavilion, the chief being the absence of the beautiful ice palace. Every effort had been made to preserve this to and through last evening, but in vain. The weather was too warm, and crystal battlement and tower faded fast throughout the day, and trickled down the floor in unpoetic pools. The whole melting mass had therefore to be removed before evening. The toboggan slide has also been removed, and last evening its place was taken by a handsome floral design carrying the insignia of the Eagle Corps. The general appearance of the great hall, however, is as beautiful as ever, and the object of endless admiration. In view of the continued enormous attendance, the ladies in charge are being strongly urged to continue the festival through the next week. It is to be hoped they will conclude to do so, there are hundreds of people in the city and thousands in the surrounding country who have not seen the wonderful display yet; and by the end of next week a great number of new visitors from the East will have come in who will wish to see the great flower show. It is anticipated that if the present success is maintained, this week will put the Flower Festival Society out of debt, and it will own its valuable lot and splendid home unincumbered. To maintain the home through the coming year, however, will require a good deal of money, and the necessary funds could not be raised in a better fashion.

The Programme.

Since the Flower Festival opened it has been almost impossible for the ladies to have the entertainment begin exactly on time, and a great many think it best that it nave the entertainment begin exactly on time, and a great many think it best that it should be so, as those who wish to go home early may have an opportunity of walking around the hall and view the various booths, and then they can take their departure as soon as the programme is carried out. There are still others who have an idea that the performance should begin as soon as they enter the hall, and end when they are ready to go. If it does not begin at once they think it will not come off, and leave, as some did fast night. All should remember that the ladies will do just what they say. Last night Miss Alice Richards opened the entertainment with a recitation entitled, "The Bald-headed Man." The young lady was applauded frequently.

The exhibition drill, given by Maj. W. H. H. Russell, was the main feature of the evening. Seventh Infantry Battallon, ninety strong, marched into the hall at a few minutes past 9 o'ciock, and after some maneuvering sixteen men were led to the stage, where a very good drill was gone through. Had the major been able to handle more men on the stage the exhibition would have been much better.

WOMAN'S EXCHANGE.

One of the Most Interesting Exhibits Made.

The Times has frequently called attention to the excellent work being done by the Woman's Exchange—a department of the fine Woman's Home—founded by the Flower Festival Society. It supplies a market for woman's handiwork in all its branches, and thus gives many self-dependont women the means of self-support. The Exchange is permanently located in the Home, corner Fourth and Main streets, but during the Flower Festival occupies the Exchange is permanently located in the Home, corner Fourth and Main streets, but during the Flower Festival occupies the first booth at the top of the west staircase. It is in charge of its regular manager, Mrs. C. B. Wheeler, whose interest and zeal contribute much to its success.

It is a very prettily decorated booth, and the display of articles attracts much attention. The stand last evening was in charge of Mrs. C. B. Wheeler, assisted by Mrs. F. C. Howes, Mrs. Murray, Miss Marie Howes and Miss Grace Miltimore. Among the most noticeable articles which they have on exhibition are the handsome plush table scarfs, the decorated china and lambrequins. They have had a large sale of what are called pepper panels, consisting of a large panel painting of the pepper tree leaves and fruit. They are much sought after by the eastern visitors.

The same is true of the orange, lime and lemon panels, which have been in much demand. The Exchange has had a large supply of cakes, orange marmandes and deficacies which have attracted the notice and money of many purphasers. The idden articles from Indianspolis, consisting of very beautiful and valuable oil paintings, one of Mt. Shasta being especially fine.

Others are of landscapes, flower clusters, etc. Two articles which excite much attention from the ladies are a crocheted set and a piece of fine embroidery. The cro snams, for which the material alone cost $20.

The embrodiery is a long and delicate, hand-worked design, intended for a pongee silk dress. These and many smaller articles of woman's handlwork (including a tennis suit complete, hat and all, of flannel, sold today) make up the attractions, which keep a large number of visitors constantly at the

A HORRIBLE DISCOVERY.

A Vile Woman Who Entices Little Boys to Ruin.

Mrs. H. A. Watson, a lady who is doing, single-handed, more than many of the churches to save the youth of her sex from a life of shame, reports a terrible case of de-pravity in a tumble-down shanty near the river on First street. It seems that a de-graded Mexican woman rented the shanty a short time ago, and fitted it up a palace of sin as her means would admit of. The vile creature has adopted a new system of carrying on her business. Her visitors are not men, but small boys ranging from ten to sixteen years of ranging from ten to sixteen years of age. She makes their acquaintance on the streets and induces them to visit her place. She then teaches them to drink wine, if they do not already understand that habit, and after she has instilled a desire to be bad into their youthful constitutions, the vile wretch makes thieves of them by inducing them to steal money from their parents. She does not seek for her victims from among the poorer classes. She is an ambitious creature, and the boys who have been induced to visit the vile den come from some of the best families in town. One lady, whose 12-year-old son has been in the habit of visiting the place, is almost crazy about it, and there are a number of others who would be if they only knew where their sons spend their evenings.

A Good Boy to Adopt.

The Police Commissioners are trying to find a good home for Frank Spear, aged 10, whose sad plight has already been mentioned in THE TIMES. The father is in jail here for drunkenness; the mother writes that she is not even able to care for her other three children; and Frank, an un-usually bright and well-behaved boy, is left to himself. The police are earing for him at present.

Christianity and Science.

The last of Dr. Morgan's series of lectures on the "Evidences of Christianity" will be on the "Evidences of Christianity" will be delivered on the above-named topic, in St. Paul's Episcopal Church, Olive street, this (Thursday) evening, beginning at 7:30 p.m. These lectures have been of much interest to those who have been in attendance. But none have promised to be so interesting to the community generally as this on Christianity and Science.

Six cases of parties arrested for running billiard tables without licenses were tried and argued before Justice Austin yesterday. After a full hearing the cases were missed. The ordinance provides that one running billiard tables for hire pay a license, and the defendants claim they are not allowing the tables to bused.

and am now Deputy Constable. I was here on November 2d, last, and was at the White House all day, from the time the polls opened until they were closed. I saw nothing on the part of the election officers delaying voting. It went on as fast as it possibly could. I saw Abbott and Ignacio Bilderrain putting men in line there, and watching them until they voted. Also saw them take men into the second-hand clothing store there, and, after a little, bring them out and put them in the line of voters. Bilderrain had on a linen duster. I could not see into it. I heard him jingling money.

Cross-examined: I did not notice the position of the tables at the door. I had no difficulty in getting out after I had voted. There were twenty-five or thirty men in line when I voted. I was Deputy Sherift that day. Mr. Gard was my brother-in-law and a candidate for Sheriff. I can just exactly swear that I put no men in line. No, sir, I did not have any money for election purposes—not a bean. I had to rustle for a quarter fo get my dinner with. I was not hurting myself in getting votes. The first time I saw Jimmy, the tramp, who was one of the men put in line, was in the County Jail. Yes, sir, if he had voted the Republicant ticket I would have thought it extraordinary. Why? Well, because he would have been the first "bum" that I ever knew to vote that ticket.

I saw nothing unusual there in the way of delay, beyond what I had always seen. I know Ignacio Bilderrain. He was doing what he always does—working fer his party. I saw him talking to men; nothing more.

Cross-examined: I was there several times in the forenoon. There was not a big rush. I did not see any thing more than there always was at previous elections. I presume there were thirty or forty men in line. Of course, it would have been better to have had more voting places.

eleven and a half years. I was a Supervisor in 1886, and as such assisted in fixing the voting precincts of this city. The matter was taken up before the change was made and discussed by the Board of Supervisors. We thought some changes should be made, and that the Third and Sixth had been too crowded theretofore. We wanted to keep the supervisor districts intact, and thought that by dividing as we did on these precincts that this would be done and the number of votes in each precinct could be considerably diminished. There was no party feeling in the matter at all. The Democratic members, of whom there were two, appeared to be well satisfied with the changes made, and made no objection whatever to the divisions as made. Messrs. Lynch, Thorn and Bilderrain appeared before the board and asked to have fifteen precincts. The board gave them no assurance whatever that this would be done. And, upon discussion, we unanimously agreed that it was impossible to do as they requested, and did not think so many necessary. We did not have time.

Crossexamined: We shought that what we had to do must be done at once. It may be that the outside members relied somewhat on Mr. Macy in myself in the matter, but they had a pretty good general knowledge themselves. We relied on our general knowledge of the population of these precincts in making the changes. I did not act on Mr. Macys information. Have lived here nine years. Voted at the White House polls, November 2d, at about 11 o'clock. There were fifty or sixty men in line. I took my turn. Walted about twenty minutes and cast my vote. Had no trouble or delay in any way. I challenged some seven or eight men at the courthouse and they did not vote. I saw Pete Donische engineering them into line.

I challenged several times, though we had a regular challenger there. I occasionally ordered men to leave the fine because I believed them to be repeaters and stuffers. I was pretty well acquainted in the ward, and if, on sizing a man up, I concluded he did not have a right to vote, I would stop him. Some men I saw there who had voted elsewhere, and when they got near the polis I told them to get out, or I would have them arrested for illegal voting. I saw no dummies put in line by Republicans. Oh, yes, the White House precinct is peculiar. A good deal of corruption is done there, and men who have votes to sell gravitate to that ward. It is easy to give a residence in that ward. There is usually a good deal of excitement in that ward, in fixing voters for the polis, getting their numbers, giving them the right numbers, etc. Solomon's tailor shop was one of the places where they took men to fix them. I don't know what price was paid for votes that day, but I have heard that it was as high as 83. The Abbott family and the Bilderrain family were well represented by workers there. If the White House precinct was divided, and the polinic-place removed from the White House, it would be to the advantage of the Republican party, because that is where the repeaters and stuffers have been in the habit of congregating, and the Democrats usually have money there and run out any one who tries to get a square deal. At the city election following, in December, the polling-place was removed to Mesmer's building, and the result was a Republican Councilman—a thing unknown before.

Cross-examined: Both parties had their workers there that day. George Gard, William Hammel and Joe Manning were there for the Republican party.

on the subject of this re-districting. I remember Mr. White and others coming befere the board and asking for an entire redistricting, but we did not think it necessary to so change it. The change we did

The only complaint that I heard about our action was from Mr. Dunkelberger, the Republican candidate for Supervisor, who taught that he had lost votes by it.

An Amateur Journel's Awful Blun-ders About Railroads.

Some malicious person—probably the same who has been regularly "filling" the Tribune people with the most astounding and laughable "railroad news"—got in his work again on yesterday's issue of that blundering sheet. The previous horrible bulls fade into insignificance beside the following, which is a miracle of inaccuracy. Yesterday's goes through the Chieo ranch, and will develop a rich, productive country.

"From Pomona to Elsinore it parallels the Southern Pacific branch."

It would be an utter impossibility to crowd a greater number of egregious blunders into the same space. The Pomona and Elsinore Railroad—despite alleged "semiofficial announcement"—will not form a junction with anything, today, tomorrow or at any other time in the near future. It does not exist except on paper, and has not a tie, a rail, or a surveyor's stake to its name. Junction, forsooth! It is not now, nor prospectively, a "branch of the Santa line, built by private parties. It does not "run from Claremont to Pomona and thence to Elsimore, on the California Southern road." It doesn't run from anywhere to anywhere. It is intended to be built some time from some point in or near Pomona—probably from the southeastern part of town—through the Chino, not Chieo ranch, and down to Elsinore, which is not on the line of the California Southern Railread, but some distance west of it. As to the assertion that the Pomona and Elsinore Railroad "parallels the Southern Pacific branch from Pomona to Elsinore," a long-suffering public would like to know what branch. If the Miss Harriet E. Dunn, of the State Normal School, spoke first on the subject of transmar and composition. No text-book is wholly sufficient. There should be ample exercise work prepared by the teacher, devised for the purpose of making the pupils think for themselves. Imitation of text-book examples must be avoided. The readingbook may be used to supply examples, and the grammar will assist the reading. Clearness of expression. Ambiguity results from a very few off-recurring errors. In composition work pupils should write on subjects with which they are thoroughly familiar. Miss Dunn then made a thorough analysis of participles and infinitives, conducting the exercise as before a class.

After the recess Mr. J. N. Keran, of Santa Ana, thoroughly explained his method of teaching book-keeping. Double-entry is the only true book-keeping. Double-entry is the only true book-keeping. Double-entry is the only true book-keeping. Actual business must be carried on, so far as toy money and play-stores will allow.

Mr. W. F. Bray, of Los Angeles, closed the work of the forenoon with the subject of geography. He criticised, the usual text-books and the teachers who adhere to them. That should be taught which will yield information of permanent value.

Prof. Ludlam conducted a very interest-

INTERMEDIATE SECTION.

Prof. Ludiam conducted a very interest-ing exercise in reading. Distinctive ideas ought to be emphasized. Selections having emphasis and infection marked are not good, for the marks draw the attention, and emphasis and infection marked are not good, for the marks draw the attention, and the meaning of the piece is not expressed. Practice prolonging the vowel sounds and giving the slides. Some ideas require force, others time, and others the slide. A period does not always mean a falling slide, nor a direct question always the rising.

After the recess, Mrs. C. P. Bradfield discussed the subject of drawing. She showed how to conduct drawing in mixed schools. All scholars should be put into one class and be given the same book to begin with. Mrs. Bradfield formed the teachers into a class and gave them a valuable model of a dictation exercise at the blackboard.

Prof. Dozier then spoke on the subject of "Compound Numbers." He advised a careful study of the metric system. The best way to make pupits familiar with its terms is to have constant comparison between the two systems of weights and measures. It should be aimed to instruct, with a view toward the gradual introduction of the new and simple system.

PRIMABY SECTION.

Yard supervision is the ounce of prevention which is worth more than a hundred pounds of cure.

A school is not well governed when the room, building and premises, including all outhouses, are not clean and tidy. Cleanliness and neatness, like all other good things in a school, must begin with the teacher. There should not be times of house-cleaning, desk-cleaning or yard-cleaning; they should always be clean.

Teachers should be constant in all things, at all times; not sunny today and sour tomorrow; not severe one day and slack the next. There should be no blue Mondays or black Fridays.

Mrs. A. S. Averill, of the City Board of Education, spoke on the subject of "Scientific Instruction on the Effects of Narcotics and Alcoholic Stimulants." Mrs. Averill read the act of the recent Legislature requiring this teaching in the public schools. Extracts were read from the best authorities on the effects of alcohol and narcotics on the human system, in order to show what points teachers should be familiar with and should emphasize in their teaching.

There are two questions that arise at the outset. What text-book shall be used? How shall the instruction be given? In answer to these questions, quotations were made from Mrs. Hunt, president of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union. Reference was made to the Journal of Education of December, 1886, which contains a discussion of the whole subject, by Francis E. Willard. To the male teachers who are in the habit of using narcotics, the advice was given that they might give their pupils valuable object lessons from their own experience.

After the usual recess the exercises were responed with an instrumental duet, finely rendered by Miss Lottle Clark and Mrs. Principal Ira More then delivered a most elouent and pleasing address on the Green.

Principal Ira More then delivered a most eloquent and pleasing address on the subject of "Moods." All the physical and moral world are subject to moods—moods of matter and of mind; fiful and semingly wayward as the comet's path, yet recurring again and again, at longer or shorter in-or ins ravorite candidate in the coming election.

Thus man exhibits all the lights, hues and shadows of the summer cloud, as this humor or that comes uppermost. The mornal condition is one of constant change. When the mood becomes fixed we call it moromania, or madness. The mood of moods is madness, yet even here it is seldom constant. There are lucid intervals when the brain resumes its old functions of changing thoughts and feelings.

It is a question asked, and sometimes answered in the affirmative, May not a man by self-discipline and culture make his whole life equal to his best moods? May not a feeling of exaltation, raising bim above and out of his ordinary self, become the rule of his life instead of the exception? May not this mood exchange its hours for months and its days for years, and make man other than the petty groveler we find him? At first view it would seem so, but on second thought it will occur to us that man lives fast in those moments. It is an atmosphere of pure oxygen which would soon burn up this bone house, the body, and leave the mind without its accustomed dwelling.

diaries for more than thirty-five years, in which each day's insurance events were moted as they occurred. These diaries, which Mr. Tappan showed to a Herald reporter yesterday, gave unmistakable evidence of having been written from day to day, and having remained untouched since, and they fully corroborate the statement made by Mr. Tappan. The latter, who is now convalescent from an illness lasting since October, admitted a Herald reporter to an interview yesterday.

"I learned only last fall," said Mr. Tappan, "that Kissane was still living, and I could hardly believe it. I have no pecuniary interest to serve, and there is no restitution to be made by him to me or to the Union Mutual Insurance Company. The company refused to pay the policy it had written upon a part of the Martha Washington's cargo, and the conspirators never dared to sue for it. If any one was entitled to restitution it was our agent, Amasa Mason, who, at Kissane's instigation, was foully assaulted and left for dead on the steps of the Burnet House. But I have a great respect for Recorder Smyth and for District Attorney Martine, and do not wish to see them decived, as the judge was who sentenced Kissane, and anything I can do to prevent this I will gladly do."

Mr. Tappan, after giving a rapid review of the facts connected with the Martha Washington case and his connection with it, continued: "I had a suspicion of something wrong when B. W. Kimball, the brother-inlaw of Capt. Cummings, took out a $10,000 policy with us, so that the instant I heard of the loss, about three days later, I telegraphed to Mr. Mason, our agent then in Buffalo, to go to Cincinnati and investigate the disaster. We spent about three times the amount of the policy in baffling the conspirators. Some of the companies paid, but others refused te; and after Kissane was sent to Sing Sing, we feit that the finishing stroke could be given to an organized band of theleves if we could learn all about them from Kissane.

"Perhaps I ought to explain that-one of their supposition members of the gang that if it hadn't been for the Union Mutual policy there never would have been any trouble over the Martha Washington fire. Kissane had been put to work in the furniture department of the penitentiary, and he was redolent with varnish and covered with shavings. Seeing his anger at me, I told him that I had come to get him out of prison, if I could, on certain conditions. His manner changed instantly, and he expressed his entire willingness to denounce his confederates, partly because he wanted revenge upon them for having deserted him. He was very bitter, indeed, toward them all. My first visit to him was paid on Thursday, June 21, 1850. On June — in company with our counsel, William M. Evarts, and Mr. John W. Hartwell, of Cincinnati, I went again to see Kissane, and he then delivered to us his complete confession, much of which he had written in my presence two days before.

"The confession was a specific and complete acknowledgment of all that we had proven on the Columbus trial, and no one could read it in connection with the testimony given on that trial without seeing that it was an exact statement of the most damnable conspiracy that one could imagine.

"In accordance with my promise to Kissane I called on Gov. Clark, and after

"In accordance with my promise to Kissane I cailed on Gov. Clark, and after hearing all the facts he was willing to grant a pardon, which was issued, I think, shortly afterward. Now, there were several copies of that confession taken. We kept the contract of the confession taken.

shortly afterward. Now, there were several copies of that confession taken. We kept one; I took one to Gov. Clark, and it was filed with the petition for pardon; Mr. Hart well kept one, and there were others made I think, for some of the other insurance companies. The only one that was used in a way to insure its being kept in official archives was the one filed with the Governor. All the other copies would be likely to be lost or destroyed as waste paper after the lapse of ten or fifteen years.

"The way in which our copy disappeared was peculiar. In our building, on Cedar and William streets, we had a large loft, where we stored old papers, ledgers, journals and other books of account. It was apparently such a safe place for such things that when one of our friends, Mr. John Austin Stevens, was going to Europe, he asked leave to store his library there, a very valuable collection of both standard and rare works. We had as janitor a negro named Jehn Gibbs, whom we trusted fully. About twenty-five years ago we began to miss articles of some value from the office, and a detective named Sampson was called in. In a day or two he caught our trusty Gibbs with a bagful of torn books at a junk-dealer's shop. On investigation, we found that Gibb had sold all our papers, had torn the inside out of all the old ledgers, etc., leaving the bindings standing, so that the theft had not been noticed, and had begun in the same way upon Mr. Stevens's valuable books. If you will look back in the Herald files of about twenty-five years ago you will find an account of Gibbs's trial, conviction and sen-upon Mr. Stevens's valuable books. If you will look back in the Herald fles of about twenty-five years ago you will find an account of Gibbs's trial, conviction and sentence to four years in the penitentiary. Among the papers stolen and sold by him was our copy of the Kissane confession.

"I understand that the copy filed at Albany has also disappeared. Knowing as I do how damaging it would be to Kissane, I am satisfied that the application to dismiss the indictment for forgery would never have been made on his behalf if he had not known positively that the paper could not be found in the archives at Albany.

"When Kissane wrote out this confession he did it with such rapidity that I made some remark about the celerity and finish of his writing. 'Just write your name for me,' he said. When I had done so he studied the writing a few moments, and then dashed off a fac-simile of it so perfect that if I had not seen him write it I would have declared that it was my own signature. He was undisputedly one of the most expert forgers of this country. When I asked him how he and his associates could have afforded to hire twelve of the most able and high-priced counsel in the country,' he grinned and said that they might have got other people's names on checks by mistake.

"I also heard of a merchant in Cincinnati here is the proof, said the merchan of Kisanae a bill by check recently at to him myself. My book-keepe it out, and, as I was signing it, he as all the street in the same and made a in the led sturbance in my signature. Here check I gave Kisanae, and the is usent shows that it passed through n hands. The signature on the forge has the same quirk as the one I gave Kisanae check, and as it is not four other you can draw your own cons.' How that forgery was covered on the though the same quirk as the same quirk as the one I gave the same quirk as the one I gave the same quirk as the one of the same quirk as the same quirk as the same quirk as the one I gave the same quirk as the one of the same quirk as the one of the same quirk as the same quirk as the one of the same quirk as the same quirk as

Mr. Tappan's statement is conclusive that Rissane did confess, as stated, and it is not impossible that the missing document itself will shortly be found.

It was this document that was procured from the records in this city and sent to William Kissane Rogers in California. It bore the seal of the State of New York, and the signatures of Kissane and the witnesses. In connection with this important and highly satisfactory paper—which was printed in this city for private circulation, and is reposing in several old pigeon-holes—and the promise of Kissane to act as a witness for the State, the influence of the insurance companies procured his release from the Penitentiary.

This was in 1856, perhaps as late as December, and Kissane gave his friends the slip and joined Walker in Nicaragua. The confession was the price of his liberation. Some men fail to accomplish much good in this world, because they attempt too much. They soar after the infinite and dive after the unfathomable, and, as a natural consequence attain heither. Nor is man the only animal who overestimates his powers. It is probably this very weakness of too much ambition which prevents the donkey from being a good vocalist. THE TIMES has canvassed this ques tion of high license versus prohibition repeatedly, defining its position on what it considers the practical side of the re-form so thoroughly that we deem it unnecessary to go over all the argu-ments again. If we do not incline to impracticable extremes, the shortcoming ought to be forgiven, in considera-tion of our accomplishing so much more for the cause of temperance. The fact that Anderson's warrant is signed, and that of Thomasson is still in the hands of the Governor, has created some dissatisfaction both here and at Socorro, as it is a well-known fact that in Thomasson's case the crime of seduction is added to that of murder, the murderer having first allenated the affection of his victim's wife, and when the husband dared him to fight and warned him to keep away from that part of the county, he laid in wait for the defender of his home, and with a Winchester shot him through the heart. William H. Lincoln, agent of a line of transatiantic steamers, said under oath that the whole business of Boston, both local and export, was involved in this matter of change in rates which the Interstate Bill brought into effect. This was a question of such importance that he had cabled his people in Liverpool to delay the sailing of a steamship, which was about to sail, until the matter was settled. He knew that other lines had done the same. The through rate from Chicago to Liverpool today was less than the local rate from Chicago to Boston. The other complaints were of about the same nature. The Commissioners have made no intimation as to what their action may be.

The Man Arrested at Globe Not Yet Identified.

GLOBE (Ariz.), April 20.—[By the Associated Press.] The man claiming to be Henry Knith, suspected of being William Springer, the Colton wife-murderer, is still in jail here waiting identification. His wanderings since leaving Colton have been pretty well ascertained. According to his own story, he left Colton on the 22d day of last December and traveled in a box car to Maricopa. He left Maricopa and visited Pheenix and Pinal and then came here. Circumstantial evidence points strongly to the prisoner as being the murderer, Springer. He says that not wishing to be burdened by baggage he left his valles at the hotel where he stopped in Colton, and believes Springer must have stolen it. When asked if he knew Springer he said "No," but he believed he had seen him twice, first at Los Angeles and then at Colton, riding in a buggy with a young lady. He described this man as a German, about his (Knith's) size, without beard, except a small sandy moustache. Aithough John Cole, Sheriff of San Bernardino county, was notified a week ago by Deputy Sheriff J. H. Benbrook, of Globe, by letter and subsequently by telegram, of the arrest of the murderer, no reply has yet been received. The prisoner still admits that the description given by the Sheriff of San Bernardino county is of him.

COMPTON, April 17.—(Correspondence of THE TIMES.) I must resume my writing or Compton will be lost in the boom. I had hoped that the smallpox would assist in this work. I congratulated myself in having in that a powerful helper, and went to sleep in perfect confidence that the line would be held, and I encouraged smallpox in every way. Didn't contradict any of the false reports and would not allow vaccination in my family, and right in the time of my over-confidence Raiph Hoyt comes with his colony and steals 7000 acres from our borders on the east. Thus now we are flanked right and left, Gardiner being on the west, and so we have lost these beautiful, productive lands, and now in my sadness I ask of what use or benefit is smallpox? I discard it henceforth as an ally in any good work.

sadness I ask of what use or benefit as smallpox? I discard it henceforth as an ally in any good work.

I don't want to say anything against Ralph. I cannot. Compton lies here coyly in vernal beauty, and he and his party, being human, saw and loved. Well, well, here is our hand, and thus will we go on together building up and beautifying our lovely plain, raising big pumpkins and bright happy families. The average Comptonian (I am not an average) considers this colony enterprise a great advantage to us. It will settle up a large tract of productive land that has heretofore been a sheep and cattle ranch. There are no reasons why attractive and lovely homes, surrounded by orchards and alfalfa fields, may not soon be created on this tract, equal in every respect to those of Compton and Pasadena. The soil and water advantages are the same as ours, and advantages are the same as ours, and the visitor, in a short-drive of two miles from our depot to the tract, can predict its future by the improvements along the way. Of course I advise settling on the colony lands and would advise everybody to settle at Compton if it would not result in driving our present people out.

advise everybody to settle at Compton if it would not result in driving our present people out.

We are the pioneers. We are those people who ten years ago and earlier came here to demonstrate the fact that these moist lands are the richest and most certain agricultural lands in Southern California, and we have become independent and comfortable by the legitimate products of our farms. We have not made a cent out of corner lots, for we have no corner lots nor roma: tic posy-popsy named tracts. We have only the good old plain American name of "Compton," without a scent of love-sick or Oscar Wilde bosh about it. The people are in character with their name—honest and substantial—and can always be relied upon for a Republican majority when the candidates are worthy. Now, it is my love for this people that prompts me to labor against the encroachments of the boom, and for this reason I favored the smalpox, not that I so much desired to embrace the plague myself, but I wanted the scare.

Alhambra.

A SIDEWALK BOOM-NOTES. ALHAMBRA, April 20 .- [Correspondence of the TIMES.] The brick block in course of construction, by Pomeroy & Stimson, is up to the second floor and fast assuming imposing propor-

Eastern visitors desiring to see one of California's loveliest spots in its prime should drive out to Alhambra and view its many beauties, made more prominent by the late welcome rain.

A cement-walk craze has seized upon or wide-awake citizens, and it is now proposed to make this improvement at once, on both sides of Garfield avenue from Main street to the depot, and also on Main street from the Ancient Order of United Workmen building to Second or United Workmen building to Second street.

William Drake, a recent addition to our census, has leased the shop on Main street, recently vacated by Beck.

Mr. Drake will establish a carriage and wagon factory in all its branches, including repair and blacksmith shop.

Henry Tilly, a young man employed in Page Bros. livery stable, was kicked in the chest by a mule early Sunday morning. For a time his life was despared of, but, under the tender care of Dr. Elwood, he is now considered out of danger, although much prostrated.

prostrated.

The ladies have been more than busy

The ladies have been more than busy during the last ten days in gathering and preparing flowers for the festival. The motto emblazoned on Alhambra's escutcheon reads, "Ever ready and willing for duty," and she and her's never tire of doing good work. Notwithstanding our local committee lacks organization this year, the individual work accomplished will reflect great credit on the whole.

Our postoffice is to be rejuvenated and modernized by the addition of yale-lock boxes, and arrangement of a vestibule that will permit renters to obtain their mail at all times of night and day. If a constant supply of stamps could be kept on hand, and none but employés allowed inside the office proper, there would be but little cause for complaint in the conduct of Uncle Sam's local establishment.

When fresh from the brazing effects of a vacation on the ocean isle last fall, the members of the Catalina Club were fast for the erection of a permanent clubhouse at Catalina for use of the members only. The enervating influences of a winter on the mainland seems to have dampened the ardor of the building committee, with a result that the club will go down to the set his coming heated term in piecemeals, as of yore.

GENERAL NOTES ANNANDALE, April 18.—[Correspondence of THE TIMES.] It has been raining here a good part of the time since April 7th. There have been no heavy falls, but five soaking showers, which the ground has absorbed as rapidly as the water fell. It is still misty and cloudy most of the time. Since the 7th of this month we have had two and a half inches of rainfall, and in the higher mountains it has snowed nearly all the time since the 7th, which will supply all streams fed by springs with abundance of water the entire season. The grain sown very early, which was large enough to shade the ground during the dry spell, which commenced the 16th of February and lasted to April 7th, will be a good crop; but that later sown, and ers, which the ground has absorbe will be an average crop, and the latter class is a large quantity. In all, there are many thousand a scress more sown this year than any previous year in San Gorgonio Pass. So I am inclined to believe the yield will equal that of any previous year. Since it commenced to rain it has been cool; before, it was quite warm. The weather, being cool, is also favorable to grain. It has snowed as low as 2600 feet above the sea level, but the snow remained but a short time. The rains have changed the feeling of all. Many are buying real estate quite liberally, and improving it. A stranger has bought and is building a business house. The building will be 24x64 feet, and, as soon as completed, he will fill it with merchandise, which has been much needed here. A two-story brick building will be erected as soon as the brick can be made at Banning. The lower part will be used for a restaurant, and the upper part for rooms. The same party who is to put up the store has also bought a two and one-half acre lot for a dwelling. There is plenty of material for good brick near Banning, and a yard there will be of great advantage to the surrounding country.

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE.

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

Los Angeles, April 19.—[To the Editor of The Times.] Trusting you Editor of The Times.] Trusting you will allow this a place in the columns of your paper, I take the liberty to address a line to the public, stating the necessities of the hour and the urgency that demands immediate action. I commenced a work here especially for children, having obtained permission to forward to the Boys and Ghrs' Aid Society, San Francisco, those for which we have no provision here. I am receiving applications from parents and guardians (also girls who are strangers here and in need of protection and help) to take charge of a class for which there is no home; every door is closed against them. Where shall the young girl go? To whom can she appeal for aid to assist her to rise above a life of shame? With all the ayenues of sin and death that wait to ensnare her and lead her down, there is not one place in our city where welcome is written over the door to one who would turn from a life worse than death. Cast out from society, friendless, what is left for poor, fallen woman? Last week I received notice that two young girls must be looked after or they would be lost. Yesterday three more such cases were reported to me. I appeal to the Christian public to assist in a work that demands immediate attention.

The officers, policemen and judges will allow this a place in the colum assist in a work that demands immediate attention.

The officers, policemen and judges are doing all in their power, but, as one of them said to me: "You have no home for them. Shall we search them out and rescue them, only to send them adrift again." My answer is no, it shall not be. The city, famous for its unbounded charity, will surely respond to an appeal for help for this class. They will not "weary in well-doing" till a home is provided where every returning wanderer will receive a hearty welcome. Very truly,

MRS. H. A. WATSON.

ESSAY NUMBER ONE.

CLAREMONTI

THE BEAUTIFUL!

Midway between San Bernardino and Los Angeles, on the Los Angeles and San Bernardine Railroad, the great Santa Fe route, four miles northeast from the town of Pomona, on the Southern Pacific Railroad, close to the mouth of the picturesque San Antonio Canyon, is located the leading townsite of all the new country developed next to the foothills of the lofty Sierra Madre Mountains.

The name CLAREMONT is indicative of clear mountain air, clear mountain water, clear from malaria, frost, fogs, and most of the ills that flesh is heir to. The site was specially chosen before any of the adjoining places were dreamed of. We had the entire line to select from, for the building of the rallroad was then a secret, known only to a few. This exquisite place was chosen:

road was then a secret, known only to a few. This exquisite need was chosen:

First—Because of the perfect slittude, which is 1300 feet above the sea.

Second—Because of the unlimited supply of artesian water, which is to be piped under pressure through every street in the town.

Third—Because of the unsurpassable scenery of valley and mountain.

Fourth—Because of the great antural park that covers miles of territory to the east—cak trees that an English lord would give 10,000 per sorre to possess.

Sixth—Because of the great extent of fertile country that surrounds it, covered with countiess-orbards of apricot, orange, peach, pear, apple and the almost endless list of fruit and vineyards, illustrating perfection in cultivation.

Seventh—Because of the "roses" that not only "Bloom in the spring, tra is," but bloom all the year round. Roses that are not equaled in the world.

The lands around the town are held at reasonable figures. Let the croaker say "the maximum in prices has been reached." I say that within five years 2000 per acre will be the price of all good fruit liand in Southern California. In Southern France and Northern Italy into an acre can be bought for a less sum. You know, and every one knows, that while this is called the "Italy of America," we surpais the example in climate, soil and peoples.

CLAREMONT is simply a place for a HOME for people who, on a moderate salary in Los Angeles, long for a quiet country home amid the most charming surroundings; for people from the East who want a place for a home that possesses all the natural attractions that makes life worth living for. To all these we say that the beautiful readence lots in CLAREMONT is not a place for a home that possesses all the natural attractions that makes life worth living for. To all these we say that the beautiful readence lots in CLAREMONT (only about one hour's ride from los Angeles, on the new road, the people's line, the Santa Fé route) can be bought now for from $500 to $500. Next month they may be, and probably will be,

Some of you will doubtless reer that about a year ago I had the of reading a paper on this suboffer the annual meeting of this in Los Angeles. A year of exce and eareful observation has ed only in more clearly and fully shing the conclusions there and et forth, and they are entitled to weight from the fact that they been amphatically indorsed at and abroad. You will not expect nore weight from the fact that they have been smphatically indorsed at home and abroad. You will not expect me to give you all the information requisite to enable you to discriminate wisely and well in the matter of citrus conditions and citrus culture in such a paper as could be read before such a meeting as this. I did not do it then: I will not attempt to do it now. As the attendance was very small at that time, and most of these present were not there, perhaps that paper might be reproduced here to advantage, if the time is not fully occupied and the audience should manifest a desire to hear it. I did not them specify localities, preferring to furnish the chart as a guide to such parties as might deem it worth their while to consult it in making a selection. And I would not now institute comparisons which would be invidious, or say anything to the disparagement of any particular locality. I et, as these meetings are held in different localities for the purpose of giving the people an opportunity to bring to the front their respective sections for what they are worth, and I am expected to do so, I will speak for Monrovia, Duarte and the Azusa, and say first what I should be compelled to say of any citrus belt—that not all the area of territory embraced in the view from the Raymond on the west, Monrovia, Duarte and Alosta on the horth, Mud Springs on the east and the Phillips tract on the south has citrus conditions that will rate "faney prime," Then I will say that so much of it will rate up to this standard that it is only a question of time when the mountain range eneirciling the lovely valley of the San Gabriel will enclose the most magnificent orange orchard in the world. The conditions for lemon and lime culture also in many places are simply perfection; they will receive more attention and yield a heavy income when we learn what some other people know about growing, handling and marketing them. It has been conceded that the citrus stock grown here is entitled to rank as high or even decidedly better th hat can be produced anyward always find ready sale at top prices.

It is to be regretted that the pioneers in citrus culture planted so largely without reference to conditions. Many without reference to conditions. Many without reference to conditions. Many of the older orchards were planted in royal vine land; for a time they flourished, and the strangers who came to visit us were driven out to see and admire them. They have lived their day, and have gone back so far that they produce only "California" or ranges now, and strangers who do not comprehend the situation fail to enthuse, and do not ask for any of the fruit to carry away with them. Until these trees are removed (and the sooner it is done, the better) we must continue to hear unfavorable comment, applied Mrs. Benjamin Count Gaveron, La France, Theresa Loth, Alfred Auburt, President d'Oblique, Madame I, Barrace, Countes R. du Park, La Marque, St. Joseph, Madame I, Plerre.

Marque, will not command their full value because our neighbors or neighboring localities produce only "California oranges." For this reason we should have a care that we do not get into that business. We should select the best varieties only, utilize our best conditions only, and produce "Monrovia oranges," "Duarte," "Azusa" and "Citrus-core" oranges, or none at all.

only, and produce "Monrovia oranges," "Duarte," "Azusa" and "Citrus-core" oranges, or none at all.

Citrus culture should not be handicapped with such locations as are better adapted to something else. That our beat conditions will give us fruit that will command the highest quotations when placed in any market under our own local brand we know, because we have fully tested this proposition. But we are yet in the incipiency of development, comparatively speaking, and have as yet achieved only so much as serves to east the horocope of our future; but it is tinged with a golden hue, and we should, with all other localities possessing like advantages, appreciate the blessings we enjoy, and return thanks because our lines have been east in pleasant places—that we have a home in a "goody land," where the sandstorm cometh not and the frost king does but little business, where sunstroke is never heard of; where the days are almost uniformly pleasant, and the nights cool and retreshing all the year round; where we have our Italy at home, more desirable and enjoyable in every respect than has ever been found by tourists and pleasure-seekers abroad; where our homes may be surrounded by the most delicate and highly-prized tropical ornamental trees and shrubbery; the home of the pepper, acacia, "Monterey cypress" and acaclyptus; where lands the entire floral kingdom is in holiday attire twelve months in the year; where we may have strawberries, to make from the entire vegetable king-dom, on any bill of fare for our Christ-things be?" We will ask them to "come and see," and they will come to stay, as some of them have done already. Not only that, but they will invest some of the many millions which the Government does not want any longer, even at 3 per cent, and if they see that an orange tree will yield $5-in acre of them will pay 10 per cent, on $3750—they will pay that price for it, and get value received for their money. A decade will probably see all our choice citrus conditions in the hands of men who will have the coin to develop them for all they are worth, and then they will not be again in the market at any price. The "handwriting on the wall" is plainly to be seen. In the near future villa homes and orange orchards will make the San Gabriel Valley so attractive that those who have nothing else to do but look for plessant places will not desire to go elsewhere, but rest content to spend their leisure hours in this vale of truit and flewers.

Mrs. Louis T. Haggin, of this city, as published a book. It is printed in rench and is called "Le Livre 'Amour," which in plain English ands for "The Book of Love." The stands for "The Book of Love." The New York Tribune, commenting on it yesterday morning, said:

She has arranged in this volume some of the most exquisite poetical selections of the century. She has gathered herein the most perfect love-songs of France—little lyrics, all grace, fragrance and music. Unerring taste has guided her in these selections. There is no bit of verse here that is not a gem of its, kind. These beautiful trifles Mrs. Haggin has dressed so daintily that the mere handling of the book is a delight. From the illuminated title to the white cover with its gold fleur-de-lis, it is a triumph of the bookmaker's art. There are only a few of these little volumes in existence, as is fitting, for they are aristocrats in the republic of letters.

The Tribune speaks by the card.

in the republic of letters.

The Tribune speaks by the card. Mrs. Haggin's book is indeed for "the aristocrats in the republic of letters," and none but the aristocratic few can possess themselves of the literary treasure. There were only 230 copies printed, and the cheapest at which one copy can be purchased is $7.50. The binding and general appearance of the volume show that no expense has been spared in its preparation. Probably few such publications have ever been issued. "Le Livre d'Amour" was published last November, but no copies were sent to the plebeian press. There are only two places where these books can be purchased—one in New York and one in this city.

A Chronicle reporter called at the local place yesterday to see the literary gem.

and one in this city.

A Chronicle reporter called at the local place yesterday to see the literary gem.

"You wish to see Mrs. Haggin's 'Livre d'Amour?" repeated the bookseller in awe stricken whisper.

"Precisely."

"I don't know whether Mrs. Haggin would like—I'm afraid it would not be right. Really—really."

"Nonsense! What is the matter with the book?"

"Nothing the matter, only it is a very select book, you know. But I guess I'll let you have a peep at it."

The book-vender's movements were then worth watching. He first went out and washed his hands and dried them most carefully. Then he took out a bunch of keys and blew the dust off of them. He chose one and put it in the lock of a richly-chased walnut case. But he did not open it immediately. His heart seemed to fail him. He turned about and sternly rebuked the apprentice, who was making a noise in the back part of the store. When silence was secured the book-dealer softly opened the door, drew out his silk handkerchief and threw it over something. Then he took out another silk handkerchief, and, after brushing off some imaginary dust from the glass case, spread it over the receptacle of the precious volume. Next he drew the something from the case and laid it on the other handkerchief. The subsequent performance of the bookseller was to take out a brand-new paper-cutter. He rubbed the point of this over some chamois leather, and then, standing at arm's length from the something in the handkerchief, he litted the handkerchief with an aristocratic daintiness. The something lay revealed in all its select loveliness. It was "Le Livre d'Amour."

"There!" exclaimed the awed bookseller, in hushed accents. There was an awful silence, and the visitor instinctively took off his hat. The cover of the book was of the daintiest and richest parchment, stamped all over with delicate fleurs de lis in gilt.

"Elegant! Elegant!" whispered the bookseller, ecstatically, as he chamoised the paper-cutter. "Is not that simply exquisite —the best French parchment."

"About si

And the bibliophile thrust the point of the burnished cutter under the cover and flipped it over, revealing the titlepage, which read as follows:

"Exquisite!" the book-dealer whispered.

"Just consider the paper—the most costly Japanese parchment! Unutterably elegant!"

Another flip and the dedication shot into view:

A MON MARL

That was all. Then the bookseller flipped over more pages, each time rubbing the tip of the cutter. There was more margin than type. In all there were 454 pages in the book, with an index in the back. The selections were all in French, culled from ninety-two authors, with eleven anonymous selections. Among the names that struck the eye as the gentleman turned over the pages were Pierre de Ronsard, can Richepin, Alfred de Musset, Catolle Mendes, Marret, Victor Hugo, Gantier, Jean Baif, Felix Arvers, Theodore Bauville and Charles Baudelaire. "There were only 230 copies," whisdore Bauville and Charles Baudelaire.

"There were only 230 copies," whispered the book man as he wrapped the handkerchief around the volume; "very select, you know. There were twenty large Japanese parchment copies at $15, twenty Whatman parchment copies at $12.50, twenty imperial crayon copies, 170 plain Japanese copies at $7.50. Just to show you how careful she was, I will tell you that a whole section of the book was printed, and it had been sent to the binders, when she discovered that one of the accents of one letter was aim when it should have been grave; so she had the whole section reprinted. Mrs. Haggin is the wife of Louis T. Haggin, a lawyer of this city, who is the son of J. B. Haggin, of the firm of Haggin & Tevis. The lady is the daughter of Samuel Buttarworth, a well-known capitalist, now dead. She and her sister, now Mrs. Sydney Smith, received superior educations in France. Mrs. Louis T. An Attempt Upon His Life in 1862

The Kidnaping Conspiracy.
[Wheeling (W. Va.) Register.]
"I am reading with a great deal of interest Nicolay and Hay's life, of Lincoln, in the Century," said Mr. John W. Nichols, ex-president of the Omaha Fire Department, to me. "The chapters that will most interest me will be those relating to his career from 1862 to 1865, and particularly the history of the assassination. It is not generally known that more than one attempt upon Lincoln's life was made in Washington, but such is the fact."

Mr. Nichols' statement interested me somewhat, and I asked him to explain. He then went on and told me substantially the following story: In August, 1862, Co. K. One Hundred and Fifth Pennsylvania Volunteers, of which Mr. Nichols was a member, was detailed as body-guard of President Lincoln. Up to 1864, owing to the vigilance of the guards, Mr. Lincoln escaped all attempts at violence. The back of the Confederacy was broken, and a good feeling pervaded all Washington, and vigilance was considerably relaxed. It was then the conspiracies were hatched and Confederates ran the city unmolested. The President and his family spent the summer months at the Soldiers Home, about three miles north of the city, whither the body-guard accompanied them. It was the custom of the President to remain late at the War Department, and after his work was concluded he would ride on horseback to remain late at the War Department, and after his work was concluded he would ride on horseback. The President was bareheaded, and as he dismounted he said, referring to his horse: "He came pretty near getting away with me, didn't he? He got the bit in his teeth before I could draw rein." Mr. Nichols asked him where his hat was, and he replied that somebody had fired a gun off at the foot of the hill, and that his horse had become scared and jerked his hat off.

"Thinking the affair rather strange," said Mr. Nichols, "a corporal and my-self went down the hill to make an investigation. At the intersection of the driveway and main road we found the President's hat—a plain silk one—and, upon examining it, we discovered a builet-hole. He remarked, was unknowingly frustrated by the body-guard, whose quarters were immediately in front of the south porch of the executive mansion, equi-distant between that building and the Treasury, State, War and Navy departments. Just to the east of the quarters were intents. Just to the east of the quarters were intents. Just to the east of the quarters were intents. Just to the east of the quarters were intents. Just to the east of the quarters were intented to the west end of the body-guard remained on duty. For the same of the war Department. Shortly afterward it was learned by the guard that on the very single the tent was moved a plan had been laid to capture the President as the should pass along the walk and carry him to the house of one Green, a notorious rebel, on the bank of the Potomac back of the White House of the gravel walk in the rear of the War Department. Shortly afterward it was always believed that the moving of the guard tent to the west end of the walk graythened the conspirators and thwarted their design.

At another time, not long before this incident, Bourke, the veteran coachman, who had served through two administrations at the White House, was to be carried to Bourke. He did not hold the place very long, however, as he became so domineering and impertant that he was in the capture of the walk and the place very long, however, as he became so domineering and impertant that he was in the capture of the walk and the place very long, however, as he became so domineering and impertant that he was inclerable. Bourke was reinstated. One night, not long after he had been dismissed, the discharged coachman was discovered sneaking about the stables, which were soon observed to be on fire. The whole guard was called out, and by great exertion saved the Presidential coach and team, the fire and the president and
